JEWISH NEW YEAR OBSERVED BY CORPUS CHRISTI HEBREWS

General Suspension of Business for Day by Members of Jewish Race.

Yesterday Jewish people throughout the world celebrated Rosh Hashanah, or the festival of the New Year. The day marked the beginning of the year 5772 of the Jewish calendar, which according to tradition is supposed to start from the beginning of the world. The celebration of the New Year festival is more generally observed in Jewish than any other of the numerous four days in their calendar, with the single exception of Yom Kippur, better known as the Fast of the Atticants.

Among those more strictly inclined, the celebration of Rosh Hashanah extends over two days, thus being the general custom in Poland and Russia. Among the more liberal elements in America, however, but one day is set aside for its observance. Those Jews who have reformed sanctify it by the modern interpretation of the scripture. The religious observance of the festival ceases, however, from business and labor and the attendance upon religious services.

In Corpus Christi the New Year was celebrated by members of the race by a suspension of business. It was a remarkable demonstration of the fact that many of Corpus Christi's best and largest mercantile establishments are owned by Hebrews to note the large number of stores closed yesterday among the number being M. Liebman & Sons, Guggenheim-Cohn Company, Wolf Brothers, Model Shoe Store, Henry Dose, J. Dorefield and Son, Meyers Variety Store, Schuman Supply Company, Neuner Jewelers Company and many others.

WRECKED STEAMER ON PADRE ISLAND DRAWS ATTENTION OF OWNER

TO PREVENT REMOVAL OF VALUABLE PARTS FROM STEAMER.

For Nearly 18 Months Wrecked Steamer Nicaragua Has Been on Padre Island.

Declaring that various parties have been visiting Padre Island and stripping the disabled steamer, "Nicaragua" of every portable object of value, and that not only will he make an effort to stop such practices, but that he will also seek to recover the missing property, Captain T. J. Anderson of Galveston, representative for the underwriters who insured the vessel, reached Port Aransas yesterday. He spent Sunday here.

For the past eighteen months the "Nicaragua" has been stranded on Padre Island. Headers of the Caller will remember that in a storm during the early part of 1912 this steamer became disabled while in the gulf; of the tearing in small boats, and remaining in the waters for several days before being rescued and of how finally the steamer drifted upon the sands of Padre Island.

Since that time no effort has been made to float the boat, and Captain Anderson asserts that for eighteen months the lawless hand of the beach-comber, with all disregard for others, has been stripping the last of every article of value that could be removed and that such articles have been sold as high as below real value.

Must Restore Property.

Captain Anderson states that this practice will stop at once or that trouble will start. He has received instructions from the owner, W. C. Nichols, of San Antonio, giving him full authority to take charge of the steamer "Nicaragua," wrecked on Padre Island, also to request by any means necessary any of the parts, spars or contents of same which have been removed therefrom. A letter of authority from the owner given to Captain Anderson states that no one has authority to tamper with the steamer or its contents.

Captain Anderson has planned to meet the yacht Gertrude at Port Aransas today and going to the scene of the wreck. He is acting both for the owner and the insurance companies.

Party From This City.

It is stated that the immediate cause of the present trip is that information was received at Galveston for the purpose of visiting the "Nicaragua" and stripping her of every article of value. The information that Captain Anderson received from this city was that the party was preparing to leave this week, and that all members were of the opinion that they had such legal rights to do so.

"Apparently," states the owner, "it is their opinion that the helpless and unprotected position of the steamer as she lies beached on the island is justification of the law 'might is right' and that they would be within their rights in stripping the vessel."

The fact that these depredations have been going on for several months has been reported to the owners and insurance agents at various times but until now no action had been taken.

It has been said that a small amount of the boat was full of the most valuable parts of the movable articles of the ship's equipment. One of the brass guns from the boat has been discovered in a Galveston junk shop and other reports are that other parts have been sold both here and in Brownsville.

A fishing schooner that arrived at Galveston last Thursday was loaded with junk from the steamer.

Would Avoid Trouble.

Those interested in the steamer are anxious that no trouble should result from any future operations by those who think that they are acting within their rights in what they have done. But Captain Anderson advises that all such parties have no legal right to remove any of the belongings.

The steamer has been allowed to remain on the island under most peculiar positions, especially when it is considered that the boat was valued at more than $100,000. Although the wreck occurred more than eighteen months ago no settlement between the underwriters and the owner has been effected. The policy under which the vessel was insured required the owner to conduct salvage operations. The owner claims that the steamer is a total loss and that the insurance companies must settle on that basis. The underwriters claim that the boat can be salvaged at a profit, and the results have been that negotiations have been continued from time to time and a decision as yet has not been reached between the owner and insurance companies.
